VASCULAR NECROSIS

DETAILED CONTENT ADVISORIES

Suicide

- The main character dies by suicide in a stylized opening scene.
- She makes occasional jokes about her suicide attempt.
- She repeatedly expresses disappointment at being brought back to life.
- Near the end, she nearly dies again — more from neglect than intent.
- Another character doesn't think they were meant to return, and turns back into a zombie intentionally.

Mental Illness & Trauma

- The main character is consistently depressed and describes having always been depressed.
- Many characters have PTSD from the zombie apocalypse, either reacting negatively to zombies or remembering what it was like to be a zombie.
- Flashbacks are represented through disturbing visuals on the TVs.

Grief & Death

- One of the characters describes how they had to find their partner after they died by suicide, how much they missed their loved one, and had a funeral for them.
- A character died from terminal cancer and describes having died alone.

Violence

- The main character is forcibly restrained in a hospital bed.
- Frequent, in-depth descriptions of violence, including characters recounting:
    - Killing humans while in their zombie state
    - Shooting zombies
    - Watching humans get eaten alive by zombies

Sexuality

- An engaged couple kiss, with one kissing down the other's chest and stomach to the pelvis.
- Two characters kiss and have sex onstage (simulated straddling, humping, and body kissing/licking).
- The sex act is referenced frequently afterward in dialogue.
- A video loop shows two characters kissing messily, mouths smeared in blood.

Xenophobia

- Zombies are treated as many minority groups are in our world.
- "Zombies" and "Rotters" are occasionally used as slurs; some zombies reclaim them.
- Humans remain wary of cured zombies, expecting attacks.
- TV segments showcase public anti-zombie sentiment.

Eating Disorders

- A character struggles to eat because it reminds him of his trauma as a zombie.
- The main character retches several times (nothing comes out, but retching sounds are heard).
- A party scene shows a character eating chips onstage.

Alcohol / Substance Abuse

- The main character dies by overdose in the opening scene, with pills spilling from her stomach in a stylized sequence; her overdose is referenced throughout.
- A character smokes onstage. (It is a prop that doesn’t emit actual haze/smoke.)

- A party scene shows casual drinking; one character drinks to excess, becomes visibly drunk, and throws up.
- A club scene shows characters drinking and acting visibly drunk (slurring, stumbling).
- "Green stuff" — a substance made for zombies — gets them drunk; the main character abuses it alone while depressed.
- She also takes prescribed pills onstage.

Blood

- A character bites another, with stage blood in their mouth.
- Some TV visuals feature fake/stage blood.

Other

- Horror elements: sound and suspense are used to frighten the audience.
- Visuals of rot and maggots appear on the TVs.
- Frequent scenes take place in a hospital and depict characters who are physically unwell.
